COMPETITION FOR ATTENTION

In the 1960s, an advertiser could reach 80% of U.S. women with a spot aired simultaneously on CBS, NBC, and ABC. Today, an ad would have to run on 100 TV channels to have a prayer of duplicating this feat.

University of Alabama

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia.

The University of Alabama (also known as Alabama, UA, or colloquially as Bama) is a public coeducational university located in Tuscaloosa, Alabama. Founded in 1831, UA is the flagship campus of the University of Alabama System. ^[Tuscaloosa, Alabama] it is often called the Capstone.

UA is the senior doctoral university in the state. Today, it is one of the state's three major research universities, along with academic and athletic rival Auburn University and the much younger University of Alabama at Birmingham \(UAB\).

Alabama offers programs of study in 12 academic divisions leading to Bachelor's, Master's, Education Specialist, and doctoral degrees. The only publicly-supported law school in Alabama is at UA. (The Cumberland School of Law at Samford University in Birmingham is the state's only other ABA-accredited law school.) Other academic programs unavailable elsewhere in Alabama include doctoral programs in anthropology, library and information studies, music, Romance languages, and social work.

As of fall 2005, Alabama has an enrollment of more than 21,750 students and its president is Dr. Robert Witt.

- ### 1. Group Seeks Resignation of Columbia University President - New York Times

As Columbia University awaits a report on charges of intimidation of Jewish students in classes in Middle East studies, a small group of graduate students began circulating a petition yesterday calling for the resignation of Columbia's president, Lee C. Bollinger, because he "failed to defend our faculty, thereby nurturing an environment of fear and intimidation throughout the university." Last week, in a speech to the New York City Bar Association, Mr. Bollinger said that academic freedom had some limits when it came to the classroom and that when there were lapses, they should not be "accepted without consequences."
- ### 2. College Faculties A Most Liberal Lot, Study Finds - Washington Post

College faculties, long assumed to be a liberal bastion, lean further to the left than even the most conspiratorial conservatives might have imagined, a new study says. By their own description, 72 percent of those teaching at American universities and colleges are liberal and 15 percent are conservative, says the study being published this week. The imbalance is almost as striking in partisan terms, with 50 percent of the faculty members surveyed identifying themselves as Democrats and 11 percent as Republicans. The disparity is even more pronounced at the most elite schools, where, according to the study, 87 percent of faculty are liberal and 13 percent are conservative.
- ### 3. Protection for Title IX Whistleblowers - Inside Higher Ed

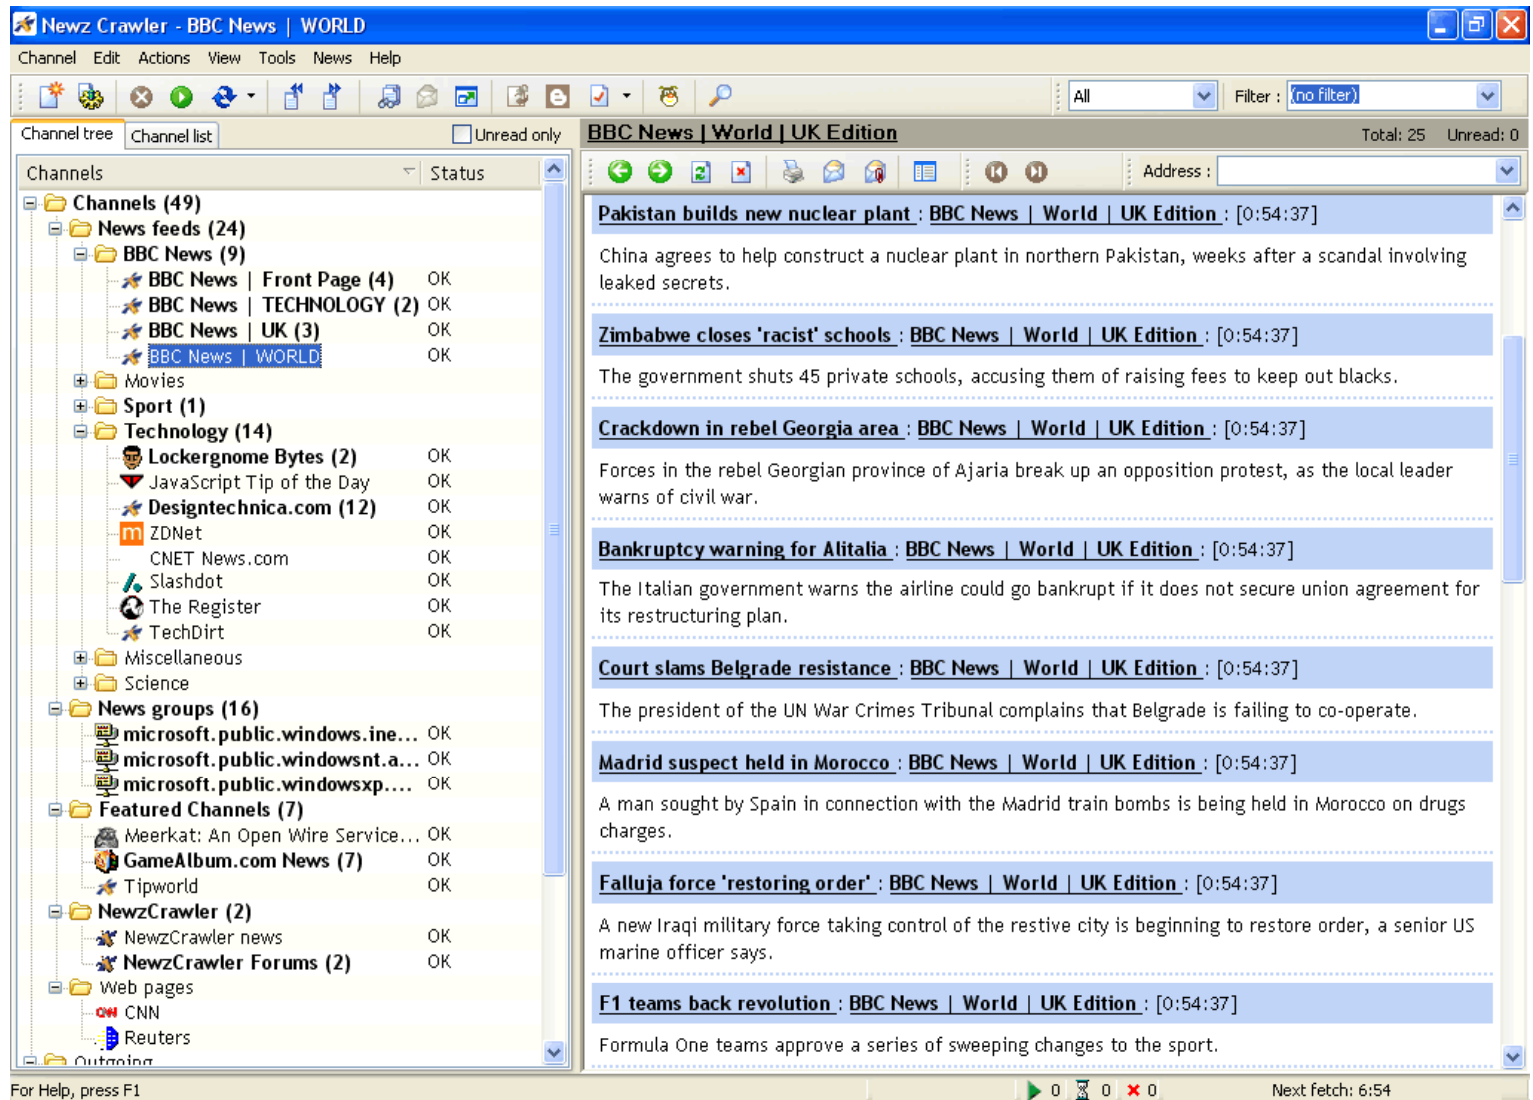

After a loss in the executive branch, supporters of women's sports received a big win in the nation's highest court. Two weeks after the U.S. Education Department issued guidelines that were widely perceived to undermine Title IX enforcement, a deeply divided U.S. Supreme Court ruled Tuesday that individuals who bring complaints about sex discrimination under Title IX can seek damages from colleges or schools that retaliate against them for blowing the whistle. Title IX bars educational institutions that receive federal funds from discriminating on the basis of gender.
- ### 4. America's best collegiate athletes often not American - Christian Science Monitor

When swimmer Ryk Neethling powered South Africa's Olympic relay team to an unprecedented gold medal in Athens last summer, the Americans were surprised, to say the least. Except for US assistant coach Frank Busch. "We'd talked about it for a long time.... Emotionally, it was an incredible experience," he recalls. As a teenager, Mr. Neethling had been recruited by Mr. Busch to attend the University of Arizona, where he competed on a generous scholarship - courtesy of the state's taxpayers. In fact, with three of South Africa's four relay medalists having attended Arizona, the school could go into the business of franchising global Olympic athletes. In some ways, they already have - and they're not alone.
- ### 5. Economic Imperative: Faced with a changing job market and New England's lowest college-attendance rate, Maine is taking new stock of its "second tier" students - Education Week

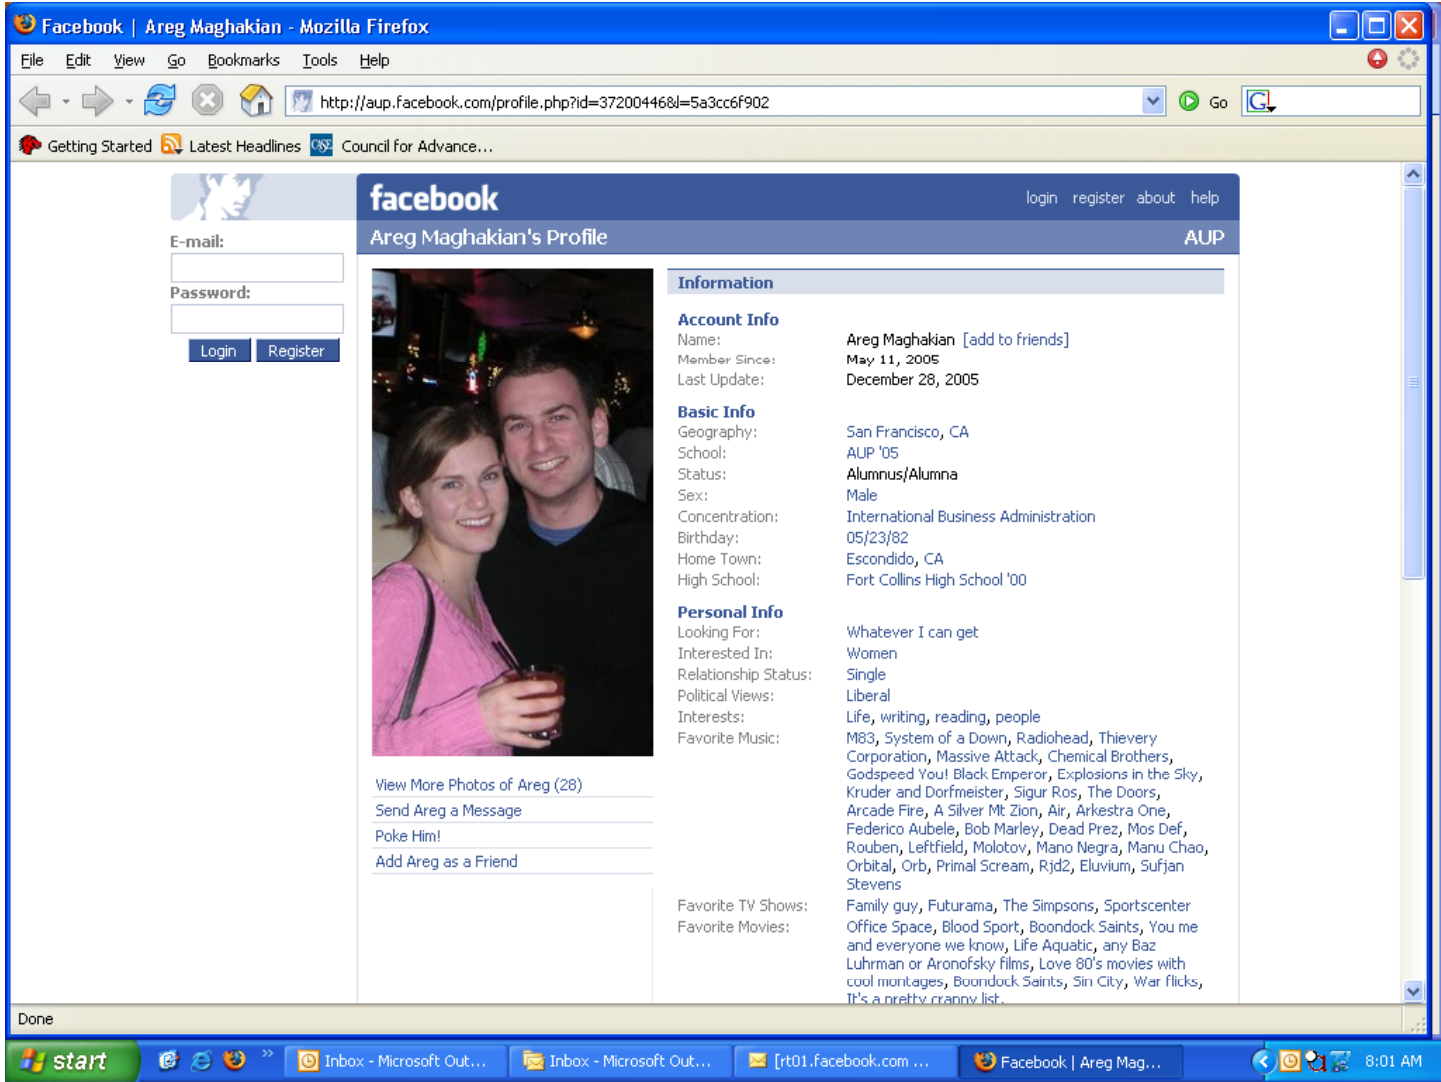

The signals had been there for years. Task force reports and researchers all predicted it. Then, in the late 1990s, the economic collapse in this blue-collar region of central Maine began. First, the Cascade Co. closed its textile mill. Then the C.F. Hathaway Co. shut down, and Dumont Industries followed suit soon after. Several stores and other businesses also shut their doors around the same time. All told, about 1,200 well-paying jobs disappeared between 1997 and 2002. Just as troubling, though, was another stubborn fact: Many of the state's youngest workers were not well prepared for the changing job market.
- ### 6. An Ivy Stepladder - Time Magazine

Roy Guzman found himself in an educational no-man's-land. A bright, industrious teen who came to Miami from Honduras nine years ago, he scored well enough on his SAT that he was being recruited by Stanford University. But despite the tuition aid he could have received, Guzman felt that he and his family weren't ready for the heavy financial burden of four years at a prestigious college. And despite his good grades, Guzman was worried that he wasn't ready academically either. But just as he was about to delay college and join the Marines, Guzman heard that Miami Dade College, one of the largest community colleges in the U.S., had created an honors college offering an advanced, university-level core curriculum that would allow him to fine-tune his skills and do it without having to pay Stanford's $29,847 tuition. Guzman has taken advantage of the fact that community colleges--the democratic, blue-collar institutions of U.S. higher education in the 20th century--are trying on more upscale caps and gowns in the 21st.
