PUT AN END TO SEXUAL VIOLENCE AT UC DAVIS

Sexual violence affects all of us.

A recent survey of students at colleges across the United States revealed that 1 in 6 undergraduate students and 1 in 14 graduate and professional school students have experienced some type of non-consensual sexual contact since entering college.

While sexual violence affects people of all genders, this study showed that students identified as transgender, genderqueer, gender non-conforming, questioning, and other genders not listed within the survey disproportionately experienced non-consensual sexual contact.

(Association of American Universities Campus Survey on Sexual Assault and Sexual Misconduct).

Just one is too many. That's why UC Davis launched a campus-wide awareness and prevention campaign last month. Education is a vital step toward putting an end to sexual violence at UC Davis.

To show your support, we're asking you to help continue the conversation. On social media, use the #UConsent and #UCDavisUpstander hashtags to spark conversations about sexual violence and to share your thoughts.

PUT AN END TO SEXUAL VIOLENCE

UC DAVIS

Even if you don't know a lot about this topic, you can still be part of the solution by becoming more informed. Here's some important background information:

What is consent?

Consent is an affirmative, unambiguous and conscious decision to participate in a mutually agreed-upon sexual act. Consent can be revoked at any time. Consent is not possible when a person is incapacitated, coerced, forced, threatened or intimidated.

When it comes to ANY kind of sexual contact, consent is mandatory, and every sexual interaction you have must embody principles of consent.

What does it mean to be a #UCDavisUpstander?

An upstander is someone who takes active, intentional steps to stop sexual assault, domestic violence, dating violence and stalking. As an upstander, you can:

- Support and believe survivors of sexual violence.
- Advocate for survivors by challenging victim-blaming statements.
- Challenge comments or jokes that perpetuate rape culture or sexism.
- Take action by directly intervening or getting help if you see someone about to engage in sexual activity with someone who is not capable of giving consent.
- Educate yourself and your peers on how to create and engage in healthy, respectful relationships. Learn more at shcs.ucdavis.edu/topics/relationships.html and shcs.ucdavis.edu/topics/sexual-communication.html
- Familiarize yourself with campus resources, such as sexualviolence.ucdavis.edu.
- Pledge to never commit or condone any acts of violence.

Beyond social media, there are other opportunities for you to get involved with the sexual violence awareness and prevention campaign at UC Davis. To learn more, contact the Center for Advocacy and Resources Education, ucdcare@ucdavis.edu or visit care.ucdavis.edu.

Put an End to Sexual Violence at UC Davis

Sexual violence affects all of us.

A recent survey of students at colleges across the United States revealed that 1 in 6 undergraduate students and 1 in 14 graduate and professional school students have experienced some type of non-consensual sexual contact since entering college.

While sexual violence affects people of all genders, this study showed that students who identified as transgender, genderqueer, gender non-conforming, questioning, and other genders not listed within the survey disproportionately experienced non-consensual sexual contact.

Just one is too many. That is why the UC and the State of California recently moved to a new definition of consent based on affirmative, 'yes means yes,' standards rather than, 'no means no.'

What Can You Do?

As an Aggie you can help us turn words into action in two critical ways: understanding affirmative consent and becoming an upstander.

- So, what is consent?
- What does it mean to be an upstander?

Be a part of this change.

Support and believe survivors of sexual violence. Advocate for survivors by challenging victim-blaming statements. Challenge comments or jokes that perpetuate rape culture or sexism. Take action by directly intervening or getting help if you see someone about to engage in sexual activity with someone who is not capable of giving consent.

Another way to help UC Davis end sexual violence on campus is to create and engage in healthy, respectful relationships; familiarize yourself with campus resources like the ones available on this page; and, most importantly, pledge to never commit or condone any acts of violence.

Help continue the conversation. On social media, use the #UConsent and #UCDavis Upstander hashtags to spark conversation about sexual violence and share your thoughts.

Be an Aggie. Be an upstander. Put an end to sexual violence.
