

Thank you for contributing to the Dawgs Suit Up Scholarship. Your gift will help more students at the University of Georgia pursue their dream jobs.

Collective generosity from donors allowed the UGA Career Center to award scholarships to 310 of the more than 1,300 students who attended Dawgs Suit Up. On Sunday, Sept. 10, these students received a full professional outfit completely free of charge at JCPenney. Professionalism is everything in today's society, and thanks to you, these students are ready for their first steps toward meaningful careers.

Here are a few words from our thankful students:

"Money has always been tight growing up. Goodwill is where [my family] got most of our clothes. ... It would be amazing to ... be able to wear custom professional clothes, simply because it's not possible for me otherwise."

"As a low-income, first-generation student, professional business attire is not handed down to me or bought often in my household. ... By being able to expand my options of discounted or free attire and wearing an outfit that fits me, I will be able to talk to employers and clients without feeling insecure or self-conscious about how I look."

"... applying to jobs means getting interviews, and in interviews, first impressions are important. I want my future employer to see me as the clean, organized and skilled person that I am which can be made possible with a properly fitted, quality suit."

You have opened doors to great possibilities, and we are so grateful for your support.
